

Next week the new musical season gets down to business in earnest.

On Monday the Vienna Symphony Orchestra plays its first concert of a tour which it begins at Queen's Hall under Weingartner. This isn't the Vienna Philharmonic, but it is probably more familiar to radio listeners, as under its regular conductor, Oswald Kabasta, it does a heap of broadcasting from the Vienna station.

Rachmaninoff makes his only London appearance at Queen's Hall to-night, with Sir Hamilton Harty, playing his own "Rhapsody on a Theme by Paganini" for piano and orchestra. Next week Rachmaninoff is one of the drawing names at the Sheffield Festival—which will probably be known to posterity as the Sir Henry Wood and who's-going-to-be-the-leader-of-the-band-festival.

That has all been cleared up now and we are back where we started—with the original leader of the London Philharmonic orchestra,
