

RACHMANINOFF'S VISIT

Famous Pianist to Play in Newcastle This Month

(From Our Theatre Correspondent)

Rachmaninoff, the world-famous pianist whose "Prelude" is the most widely known piano composition, starts a provincial tour next Sunday at Liverpool.

On March 22 he will play at Newcastle, and four days later will visit Ireland for the first time.

Although he spends several months of the year travelling he avoids the sea as much as possible, and it has taken Harold Holt, the impresario, years to persuade him to cross the Irish Channel.
