

Rachmaninoff Concert Evokes High Praise

One of the finest concerts that Montgomery has ever experienced was heard Thursday evening when Sergei Rachmaninoff appeared in a piano recital. In a program ranging from the works of Bach to the modern DeBussy, some of the world's finest music was presented before a large and appreciative audience.

At the conclusion of his program Rachmaninoff responded to the repeated recalls and returned to the piano. As he struck the first chords of his famous C. Sharp Minor Prelude, the audience thundered its appreciation and approval. This piece is heard often but it is once in a life-time that one hears it interpreted by the composer himself; one realized that it had never been heard before.

After an enthusiastic ovation Rachmaninoff offered the Spinning Song from Wagners Flying Dutchman. This brought to a close an event that will live long in the memory of those who were present.

Those going up from Andalusia for the concert were: Mrs. E. S Thigpen, Mrs. T. F. Plummer, Miss Elizabeth Selman, Mr. Donald Plummer and Mrs. R. K. Coffee.
