

RACHMANINOFF AND THE LITTLE GIRL.

(To the Editor of the 'Evening Chronicle'.)

Sir,—It may interest those who attended the recent recital by Rachmaninoff in the City Hall to read of a pleasant little incident which took place unseen by many.

When the famous musician returned to the platform in response to the great applause and call for encores he noticed a little girl on the platform clapping vigorously. He immediately stooped and took both her hands in his.

This showed that the interpreter of beautiful music had an equally beautiful mind.—Yours, etc.,

LOVER OF CLASSICAL MUSIC.

Uncle Nick referred to this incident in his talk to Gloopers in last night's "Evening Chronicle."—Editor "E.C."
