

Rachmaninoff's Visit.

DURING the summer months whilst Palm Beach, at California, is crowded with holiday makers, amongst which are quite a number of world celebrities, Rachmaninoff, the greatest living composer-pianist, is quietly at work at his residence which overlooks the famous beach, carefully preparing his programmes for the winter concert season in Europe. The manner in which he works during this period is reflected in the beautifully-compiled programmes he presents at his concerts. To-morrow, at the Colston Hall, this great artist is appearing for the only time in Bristol, and the many hundreds who were unable to obtain tickets when he was last here will welcome this opportunity of hearing him. Tickets are still obtainable from Messrs Churchill. It is worth remembering that these international concerts are not only enjoyed by large audiences of Bristolians, but attract many visitors from other towns and the countryside, and are doing much to enhance the reputation of the city as a musical centre.
