

Rachmaninoff Pied Pianist for U. Pavilion Rat

A rat, who has been wont to prowl nocturnally in the university's spacious stock pavilion, was lured to his death by Sergei Rachmaninoff's music there Monday night much as the rodents of Hamelin were lured by the Pied Piper.

The rodent appeared on the floor during the intermission at the famed pianist's concert. Vocal gymnastics of a university coed announced the arrival.

Three students, armed with clubs, cornered the rodent, killed it.
