

Rachmaninoff In Newark.

Rachmaninoff, the world's foremost musician, is the next in the Fuerstman Series of Concerts being held at the Newark Armory. At each of his concerts Mr. Fuerstman turns the immense drill shed into a temple of wonderful music by means of an immense canvas ceiling and other superb arrangements of seating, lighting and stage. Such has been the satisfaction and delight derived from the last concert given by Louise Homer and daughter, and from previous great artists who have appeared in the present series, that another capacity audience is expected on Tuesday evening when Rachmaninoff gives his concert of music for the piano. This illustrious Russian is the greatest drawing card among pianists now before the public. As a rule, wherever he appears the houses are sold out long in advance of his concert.
