

<https://www.newspapers.com/image/355114062/>

There will be opportunity for comparison of two pianists, each one in the comfortable enjoyment of fame, within the next three days. Sergei Rachmaninoff will play at the Auditorium a collection of works old and new, including some of his own, this afternoon. Josef Hofmann will come to the Studebaker Tuesday afternoon and play nothing but Chopin. Each instance offers both interest and pleasure.