

RACHMANINOFF TIRED OF HIS OWN PRELUDE

Composer Wants People To Forget He Wrote It

London, Nov. 5.—Serge Rachmaninoff wants the world to forget that he composed the world-famous "Prelude" 15 years ago. He recently arrived in England for a short vacation and to give two concerts.

"Everywhere I go they play it," he complained. "Whenever I play at a concert I must play the 'Prelude.' I think at every concert I have played I must have played that piece. I have heard it too much."
