

When Rachmaninoff Plays.

So numerous have been the requests made for the great Rachmaninoff to include his C sharp minor Prelude in the programme for next Tuesday night's concert at the Colston Hall, that Messrs Lockier and Powell state that they cannot possibly personally reply to any more. They explain that, although the Prelude is not actually in the programme proper, M. Rachmaninoff has definitely agreed to play it during the evening. Thus, all the "would-be" Rachmaninoffs will learn the correct rendering of this composition from the great Maestro himself. Rachmaninoff is not only a great pianist, but he possesses an outstanding technique.
